Fuel Administrator Williams Amends Emergency Rules. Nineteen Cars Arrive.

Hamilton County Fuel Administrator R. H. Williams bas amended the emergency coal rules which he issued Saturday, Jan. 5.

The regulations as amended state that the dealers are no longer required to admit peddlers and other customers to their yards. Mr. Williams, also, in the second section of the amendment, revokes the order allowing no dealer to sell over one-hall ton of lump coal, or more than one ton of run-of-the-mine to a customer. The amendment to this allows the dealers to sell as much as two tons of run-of-mine or one ton of lump coal to a curtomer, with the exception of such places as schools, hospitals or other public institutions, whichby spe-cial order from the administrator, may

Some Relief.
Some relief for the present coal situation was in sight Tuesday morning. as reports were heard from most of the coal dealers and the railway yards. There were very few coal yards that were entirely without coal, and the sitvation in the suburbs seemed to be very much better. Fourteen cars came in over the Southern to be delivered to the retail dealers, during the forenoon Tuesday and five cars over the N., C.

St. L., to go to the dealers. The special wood committee of the manufacturers' association felt that the prospects for getting wood into the city was now sure and that they would have no trouble in getting a good sup-ply. Authorities from the county said that the county forces were working Tuesday hauling and cutting wood. Secretary Brewer also received a bill of lading from the N., C. & St. L. for a car of wood loaded by J. Luther Troxell, at Bridgeport, Ala. He also received word from Dr. Dupree informing him he would have a car coming present.

Some irate citizen at East Lake called up the administrator to tell him an empty coal car had been standing on a siding near Bryan L. Cate's coal yard in East Chattanooga ever since last Friday, when it was unloaded. This irate citizen, who was evidently anxious to see another loaded car in his neighborhood quick, wanted to know why it was if the mines were short of cars, this car was not picked up long ago and sent back to some up long ago and sent back to some mine for reloading.

There has been considerable complaint on the part of dealers about empty coal cars being left standing on sidings, for days at a time, after hav-ing been unloaded. MISSISSIPPI LEGISLATION TO VOTE FOR PROHIBITION

Jackson, Miss., Jan. 8.—The regular biennial session of the Mississippi legislature was convened here today with the prospect that the question of ratification of the proposed prohibition amendment to the federal constitution would be one of the principal features of general interest to come before the session. Other mat-t's included in the 1918 legislative program were the questions of re-vision of state tax system, $1,000 bond issue for improvement of the state's schools, taxation of worthless dogs in the interest of sheep raising, and making school attendance compulsory.

That Mrs. Rene is alive was due to her presence of mind in throwing herself across the body of H. J. Poe. a Los Angeles traveling man, who was killed, and feigning death. They said the train was stopped near Kilometer, and that when Conductor Parades and several passengers alighted, the Yaquis opened fire. The conductor was bayoneted, they said.

The Indians then went through the train. Poe was shot as he reached for his pocketbook, while asking the Indians if they wanted money, passengers said, and one old man was slain as he pleaded for the lives of his two daughters.
